

William B. Meyer, Inc. Achieves Status of FIDI Accredited International Mover

In early 2018, the International Relocation team of William B. Meyer, Inc. achieved the renowned status of a FIDI Accredited International Mover (FAIM) from the FIDI Global Alliance. Founded in 1950, FIDI is an alliance of international relocation companies that specialize in moving household goods and personal items across the world. It includes over 600 affiliates in more than 100 countries spanning the five continents. In 1997, FIDI established FAIM as a way of regulating and upholding the highest quality standards for members of its organization.

Achieving the FAIM certification for William B. Meyer, Inc. means that our international moving processes and procedures conform to the highest level of service regulations. As a member of FIDI we will be consistently audited by a third party assessment company to ensure that we are upholding these standards with every relocation we manage.

As noted on the FIDI website, “Every FIDI Affiliate complies with the rigorous FIDI-FAIM quality standard, generally accepted as the supreme professional industry standard worldwide. This ensures final customers that only the top quality movers are part of the network. To us, clients’ satisfaction is the most important, and we can only reach this if they can trust our members.”

Chad Francis, International Move Manager at William B. Meyer, Inc., spearheaded the project. He noted that, “in the international move community, FIDI accredited movers are the standard that our customers expect. Thanks to the hard work of everyone on our team, we were able to earn this accreditation. This is going to make a big difference in how our international move management services are perceived by our partner agents worldwide and our corporate clients.”

As a new member of the FIDI global alliance with the FIDI-FAIM mark of quality, William B. Meyer, Inc. will continue to provide customers with the high level of service they’ve come to expect. After completing the thorough audit and inspection process, the International Relocation team is now looking forward to providing comprehensive international move management services to families, individuals and companies.
